Measures of macro-economic performance

Studying A Level Macroeconomics means that you need to write in context, which means using economic data from the last 20 years. Complete the grid below by adding the correct rate for each year. This information will be used throughout the two year course.

Measure	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023
Inflation RPI
Inflation CPI
Unemployment
GDP
£/€
Rate of Interest Base rate
Current account on balance of payments

Microeconomics Industry Examples

When studying A Level Microeconomics, you will need to write in context, which means talking about specific industries and relevant examples from these markets. Complete the boxes below by adding examples of recent news stories, events, or data to each box from research online and/or your own knowledge.

Car Industry	Market for single use plastics	Market for healthcare
Oil industry	Fast food industry	Technology industry	